

Below is a letter distributed to customers by Lam Research:

Dear

I am writing to thank you again for discussing with me recently the exciting news of our proposed merger with KLA-Tencor. We appreciate the tone of positive support for the transaction that we've heard from the industry globally. That was my hope, but it is genuinely appreciated to see the encouraging response and reinforcement of our strategic vision. We recognize that we cannot accomplish this vision without you and in that context want to sincerely express our appreciation for the opportunities you have provided Lam historically and the desire to develop the depth and breadth of our collaboration in the year ahead.

We have emphasized in all recent communications with customers, employees, and shareholders that the most important validation of this strategic decision will be the enhanced capability of the combined company to innovate and deliver value at a level not possible as standalone companies. You have our full commitment that our business combination has one primary purpose: to better support the technology and economic roadmaps of your business, in order to contribute more as a member of your supply chain, to the success of your company and your vision.

We plan to invest to continue strengthening the relationships of collaboration and trust. My hope is that as soon as practically possible, we will transition from the theory of creating value to one of substance. As the merger process evolves, we look forward to hearing your views on how our combination can bring additional value to your company; beginning in the March 2016 quarter, we would like to initiate discussions to plan for specific combined company joint development activity with you, so that we increase our ability to deliver on our fast to customer solutions ambition.

With no product overlap and a natural market complement, we are confident that the combination of Lam Research's and KLA-Tencor's capabilities in process and process control will enhance our ability to partner with you in addressing your most difficult challenges. We will have an absolute focus on meeting our commitments as standalone companies through the period of integration; we will never compromise our most important Vision Objective of being "number one in customer trust" or our Core Value of "think: customer, company, individual" in everything we do.

With this opportunity comes increased responsibility for Lam. Like other firms in our industry, KLA-Tencor has a long history of supplying equipment to the broad semiconductor eco-system, including wafer manufacturers, mask manufacturers, other wafer fab equipment (WFE) vendors, even firms that compete with KLA-Tencor; Lam Research also has some experience with that same industry inter-relationship complexity. As a combined company, we want to assure you of our intention to continue the existing KLA-Tencor supply and support relationship with your broad eco-system suppliers, whether they are our competitors or not.

Like you, our company places a very high value on protecting proprietary information – both our own and that of our partners. We are intuitively compelled to deliver to all players within the semi eco-system that high standard of trust in protecting confidential information and IP for the benefit of all participants.

Related, we wanted to advise you that in separate written correspondence, we shared this same commitment with KLA-Tencor customers who may be part of your supply chain, including the other WFE companies, materials companies and mask shops within the eco-system broadly. While we are still in the early stages of our integration planning, there has never been any question that Lam would continue this policy.

Today and until the time of closing, we will continue to operate as two separate companies. While it is clearly too soon to articulate how we will operate as a combined company, we want to embrace the perspectives of you and your team in our planning and will seek your guidance along this new journey for Lam. On behalf of the more than 12,000 employees that will represent the combined company, I want to personally assure you of our continuing commitment to best-in-class products and our focus on technology leadership, productivity, and speed to solutions.

As you might expect, there are important legal statements included in the attachment, which we are required to incorporate in certain written customer communications at this stage in our business combination process.

Never hesitate to reach out to me at any time with comments or questions. We always welcome your feedback, and we genuinely appreciate your support.

Sincere regards, Martin
